

Cell phone usage on planes should remain banned unless under extreme emergency circumstances. The small cabin space in typical airplanes would mean that although it may be a convenience to a few, it would be an annoyance to many. I think most people would agree if they had to spend an hour and a half listening to the person 3 inches to their right conversing with Aunt Marge about her bunyons.